SPECIAL ABILITIES

FIRING SPECIAL ABILITIES

Destruction (advanced rules)

When a Firing Action would result in Destruction markers (Rulebook, p. 15) being added to a building, the acting player may elect to place a Breach marker rather than a Destruction marker.

A Breach marker is a special kind of Destruction marker with some additional rules.

Just like a normal Destruction marker, you place a Breach marker (on its 1 Destruction point side) on a Building, or turn over an already placed marker to show 2 Destruction points.

1 destruction side

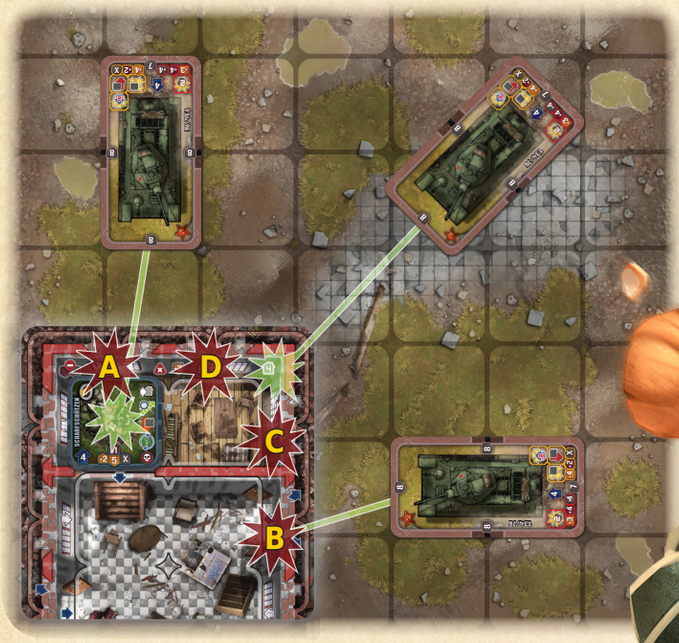

2 destruction side

However, where exactly you place a Breach marker depends on the source of the Destruction point.

If a Firing Action targets a unit inside the building, the Breach marker is placed (or increased) on the wall between the target unit and the firing unit (A).

If the shot was against the building itself, the Breach marker is placed (or increased) on the wall closest to the point of impact (B).

If the point of impact is a corner, the player chooses between the two walls that join in that corner. (C and D).

One of the other ways that Breach markers differ from normal Destruction markers is that they create openings in the walls of a building, similar to a door (Rulebook, p. 12), so infantry units can enter or exit buildings through breaches. However, if the breach is only 1 destruction point, the unit must stop its Movement Action on the other side of the breach.

Total both Breach and Destruction markers together to see if the sum is at least equal to the Structure value of a building (or section of a multi-part building), and if so that Terrain Element is Destroyed.

If Destroyed, flip the terrain tile over to its rubble side.

Every infantry unit inside receives 1 Suppressed Marker and, starting with the player with Initiative, each player redeploys all of their units that were inside the Structure into the rubble.

Hawk-Eyed

When this unit fires, it ignores penalties for long range.

MOVEMENT SPECIAL ABILITIES

Urban Fighter

Once per Activation, units with this special ability may enter or exit a building via a white arrow opening, either as part of a Movement Action (including Assault) or during a Forced Move (such as losing an assault).

NEW TERRAIN ELEMENT

Large Buildings

Large buildings cannot be Destroyed, but their walls can be breached to create an opening.

RECRUITMENT OPTIONS

GEAR OPTIONS

Additional Shielding

Restricted to Heavy Vehicles

This option gives you 3 Additional Shielding markers.

Each marker grants you a +1 Defensive Bonus.

RPG 40

Restricted to Infantry

This option gives you 3 RPG 40 markers.

These grenades work the same way as regular grenades, except that they target squares instead of interspaces.

CHARACTER TRAITS

Hard-Boiled

This character trait gives you 3 Hard-Boiled markers.

Discard a Hard-Boiled marker to remove a Suppressed Marker from one of your units.

Overwatch

Restricted to Infantry

This character trait gives you 3 Overwatch markers. Your unit can use Opportunistic Fire.

Only units that have not been activated may use an Overwatch marker.

A unit that fires loses any Order Token it had and receives an Activated Marker.

Sprinter

Restricted to Infantry

This character trait gives you 3 Sprint markers.

For each marker discarded during a Movement Action, your unit adds 1 to its Movement Value.

It also ignores Difficult Passages.

Trainings (Urban Fighters)

Restricted to Infantry

A Training character trait grants the pictured Special Ability to the units of the Recruitment Tile in which the trait is placed.

ORDER OPTIONS

Concealed

Restricted to Infantry

This Order gives you 2 Concealed markers.

These markers work like the Ambush special ability (Rules, p.15).

During deployment, then at the beginning of any Supply Phase (before you move your units), you can assign a Concealed marker to an infantry unit. Replace the unit with the Concealed marker and put the unit next to its Recruitment Tile.

The Concealed marker will now behave as an infantry unit with the Ambush special ability. If the Ambush unit is spotted (and is flipped to its Inactive Side), replace the Concealed marker with the corresponding unit counter and take back the Concealed marker. You can use it again in the next Supply Phase.

Initiative

You can use this order to keep the Initiative for the next turn. At the end of the current turn, announce you are keeping the Initiative and discard this option's marker. Your opponent will get the Initiative back normally after the next turn.

CUSTOMIZATIONS

A Customization is a special recruitment option that can only be used by Characters. They can be support, gear, or character traits. If the customization gives makers (such as grenades), their use is limited to the number of markers.

Customizations that give one or more markers can benefit any unit in your army if the option is on a Command Tile.

Important: Some characters have slots that can take Customization Options, but none are included in the Heroes of Stalingrad box. There are additional expansions that can include Customization Options that those characters can employ in custom scenarios.

Life Points (David Kintz)

Restricted to Infantry

Some units use Life Point markers. Discard one to cancel one Damage or one Hit the unit just suffered. If the shot inflicted a double hit, you must discard 2 Life Point markers. If the unit does not have enough Life Point markers, it suffers one regular Hit per missing marker.

Special Abilities

Some customizations simply gift the character with a new special ability. That ability is considered to be printed on the character's counter and is lost if the unit is Destroyed. Such an ability cannot be used during an Alternate Firing Action.

Ranged Weapons

These customizations provide an Alternate Firing Action. Some also grant special abilities that are available only when making the Alternate Firing Action.

Melee Weapons

If a weapon grants the Assault special ability, it replaces the character's usual weapon if the option's bonus is higher. Any other special abilities on a weapon add to the character's existing abilities.
