Operation Bodyguard (Allied campaign to deceive the Germans) was a complete success, the Germans didn't know what was coming; they hardly put up any resistance.
The Atlantikwall looks more like a small hedge instead of a wall, the Germans lacked ammunition and organisation, their cause was hopeless. By the end of the day all beaches are linked, Cherbourg is captured and a strong beachhead is established. The Allies start their run to Berlin and this war will be over before Christmas.

The Germans put up a spirited defense but stood no chance.
Their defenses were overrun and the Allies broke through easily. Several beaches are already linked and heavy material is starting to come ashore. Though not all goes according to plan, some pockets of German resistance still remain and the most important objective (Cherbourg) is not captured yet. But it will just be a matter of time before the Allies can start their drive to liberate Western Europe.

On some beaches the landings went easier than expected and the Allies broke through the defenses sooner.
Several beaches are already linked and the landing of reinforcements is picking up pace. But the Germans aren't defeated yet and they are hanging on tenaciously. It will be a tough fight to break out of Normandy but the odds favor the Allies.

History repeats itself.
The Allies ran into several setbacks and the Germans weren't really prepared for an invasion. At the end of the day none of the Allied objectives were achieved but the Germans also didn't succeed in pushing the Allies back to where they came from. It will take a long time before this war will end.

The Atlantikwall wasn't really as strong as the Germans believed.
In some places the defenses held and could contain the Allies to the beaches but in other places the Allies broke through. German reserves are starting to arrive and the Allies couldn't land as much troops as they wanted so the odds favor the Germans. But it will be a tough fight to contain and push back the Allies.

The Allied invasion was fierce but the Germans succeeded in containing it.
On three beaches the Allies have a very tenuous foothold, but landing on the other beaches wasn't even possible due to the strong defenses. With the Allies holed up on a couple of beaches and German reserves starting to arrive it will be a matter of time before the last beach is cleared of Allied soldiers and Germany is safe again.

The Atlantikwall holds strong.
Operation Bodyguard (the Allied attempt to deceive the Germans) failed miserably. The Germans were waiting for them on the beaches of Normandy. Field Marshall Rommel's fears that the Atlantikwall was not strong enough were unfounded. At the end of the day the Allies are pushed back into the sea, their casualties number in the hundred thousands, a couple of hundred ships were sunk as well. It will be some time before they try this again. The German Fatherland is safe!
