Rex, General Raymond O. Barton's dog, ran away. Clearly the slop in the officers' mess was not to his liking.
A small force of "officially appointed volunteers" has been sent out to retrieve him. The problem is that the damned mutt has wandered toward the German lines...

Composition of the Armies

Battlefield and Deployment

The American player places his units, except the Willys jeep, in the deployment zone.

The German player places his units outside the battlefield.
In order to bring one into play, the German player must give it an order. He can make it enter on any side of boards C2-B, C3-A, or C5-B. Units can move to the whole or less of their Movement value (even 0 space).
He cannot bring units into play during the Supply phase.
The MG Nest is placed at the start of the game.

Scout Special Ability cannot be used in this scenario.

Remove the following cards from both decks:
Weak Point, Precision, Bogged Down, It Bounced Right Off It, Hit and Run, Ram, Don't stop!, Repairs, Surprise, Booby Trap (German), Geballte Ladung (German), Panzerfaust (US) and all the Artillery and Airstrike cards.

The American player has the initiative.
Thus he deploys first.

Each player draws 4 cards.

Victory Conditions and Particular Information:

Rex appears at the end of the Supply phase of turn 2. Roll a die, and refer to the plan above. On a roll of 6, it appears at the end of the next Supply phase. Once placed on the battlefield, it moves immediately.

Movement of Rex
Place a blast pattern on his space, and roll a die in order to determine the direction. On a result of 5 or 6, Rex doesn't move. Then roll the die again, and move Rex that number of spaces in a straight line. His movement is not ended by rough terrain ( ). Rex's movement automatically ends on the last space before leaving the gameboard or entering a space occupied by a German vehicle.

- During the Order phase, the American player can give Rex an Order token if one of his units is within 4 spaces or fewer of him, with a Clear LoS on him. During the Activation Phase, Rex then moves toward the closest American unit a number of spaces equal to a die roll.

- If Rex has no Order token, he moves at the start of the Supply phase, in the way described in the preceding paragraph.

- If, at any moment, Rex crosses or ends his movement on an American unit (jeep included), he stays with it, and tags along with the unit, without any order token and without any dice roll. Rex detests the Germans. He can cross or end his movement in a space occupied by a German unit, but he will not follow them.

- If a unit (American or German) within 4 spaces of Rex fires, Rex moves 1d6 spaces as far away from the shot as he can. The player who controls the enemy army of the unit that fired decides the details of his movement. If Rex is attached to an American unit that fires, he will leave it, and moves as explained above.

- Rex does not react to assaults.

You cannot kill Rex.
Not take into account the Movement value on the counter.

The Willys jeep arrives in the American deployment zone in Turn 3's Supply phase, and can be activated in Turn 4.
If Rex gets into the jeep, he stays there even if there is gunfire.

The game ends at the end of the 7th turn, or as soon as the American player gets Rex out through one of the spaces of his deployment zone.

Match draw: Rex leaves, but the German player has gained at least 10 victory points by inflicting losses to his enemy (see rulebook, page 4, Victory Conditions).
German Minor Victory: Rex doesn't leave.
German Total Victory: Rex doesn't leave and the German player has gained at least 10 victory points.
American Minor Victory: Rex leaves.
American Total Victory : Rex leaves and the American player has gaines at least 8 victory points.
